

CHARING CROSS

MODERN. CLASSIC.

For 140 years, the Charing Cross Hotel has stood as a monument to the confidence and vision of the Victorian railway pioneers. Its grand scale and magnificent architecture hark back to a more genteel age – a unique point of view it faithfully retains as part of the Guoman collection. And with its superb facilities and impeccable service, it sets new standards of excellence for our own century too.

INDIVIDUAL. ATTENTION.

Unobtrusive, yet efficient service – another Victorian virtue, carefully maintained. From our event creator to help with your planning, to your dedicated service contact on the day, you'll be in the best possible hands at every stage. And with exclusive menus including healthy, savoury and sweet options, we can literally cater for your every requirement. Because we always remember whose event this is.

GRAND. DESIGN.

You have to hand it to Edward Middleton Barry. Most architects, if they'd designed the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden, would consider their career complete. For Barry, however, it was merely the overture to his masterpiece, the Charing Cross Hotel. And here in the Betjeman Suite, we see him at the height of his powers. The marble pillars, the dance floor, the elegant sculpted ceiling and glittering chandeliers are exactly as they would have been in their Victorian heyday. They really don't build them like this any more.

SOCIAL. FUNCTION.

Gala dinner, charity ball, product launch or corporate reception – whatever the occasion, the grandeur of the Betjeman Suite can comfortably accommodate your event, and your guests. And we do mean comfortably, with air-conditioning, and a separate break-out area for buffets and refreshments giving maximum space to mingle.

DETAILED. ARRANGEMENTS.

The same period elegance, on a more intimate scale. We've the Victorian designers to thank for the natural daylight that floods our meeting rooms: the technology, in contrast, is as up-to-date as it comes.

PRIVATE. DISCUSSION.

A world away from the city's bustle, our rooms are perfect for executive meetings, and gatherings demanding quiet and privacy.

TABLE. TALK.

Sumptuous food, glorious wines, immaculate surroundings. Private dining, perfected.

CONNECTING. ROOMS.

Bring everyone together in the Betjeman Suite, then arrange as many of the adjoining rooms as you need for training sessions, seminars and smaller group discussions.

SELECT. COMPANY.

Our meetings and events facilities are entirely self-contained, giving you the privacy you need to focus on business, or enjoy your big day in uninterrupted splendour. And with broadcast facilities and high-speed BT Openzone internet connection throughout, you can stay in touch, even though you're out of the office.

HOME. COMFORTS.

Charing Cross is a railway hotel, but at the end of a long day, getting on a train is probably the last thing you feel like doing. Happily, you don't have to. Simply book one of our Executive Rooms or Junior Suites, and as well as a privileged rate, you'll receive access to the comforts of our private Guoman Club lounge which includes a personal welcome from our Guest Relations Manager. So, leave the rush hour to others and enjoy a relaxing evening, and a restful night's sleep. Because while Charing Cross has a strong sense of history, we like to think it has a real feel of home, too.
